Naomi Campbell will be hosting this year's Fashion for Relief charity runway in Cannes. The event will be in aid of Save the Children and will take place on Sunday 13th May 2018 during the Cannes Film Festival.

This year (2018) is the 13th year Campbell founded the Fashion for Relief charity. The charity allows Campbell to use her industry influence to support important humanitarian causes such as the fight against Ebola as well as provide relief after disasters such as the Haiti earthquake, Hurricane Katrina and the Japanese earthquake and subsequent tsunami. This year's proceeds will enable Save the Children to provide life-saving food, shelter and medical treatment to children around the world, including those who have been affected by the conflict in Syria.

Campbell will call upon her model and celebrity friends to join her on the catwalk, where they will be dressed in items donated by some of the world's most well-regarded fashion houses. Some of these guests include Kate Moss, Kendall Jenner, Leonardo DiCaprio, Bella Hadid, Donatella, Gigi Hadid, Will.I.Am, Heidi Klum and many more. Previous supporters of the charity have included Beyoncé, Justin Bieber, Claudia Schiffer, Jourdan Dunn and James Corden.
